Garden cleanup time: do it now

Warm fall weather is encouraging many of us to delay putting our gardens to bed, but late September and all of October are the best times to do it.

Some tomato lovers leave their plants in the ground in hopes that their green tomatoes will ripen. It's time to give it up. The same is true for peppers and cucumbers and other garden favorites.

Pull spent vegetables and annuals and put them in the composter. (Take good-sized green tomatoes off the branches. Put them in brown paper bags or a box. Check regularly for mold or rot. Over days or weeks, they will ripen.)

You can leave healthy perennials standing. They can trap insulating snow and provide a bit of winter interest. But if any plants show signs of disease, pull them now.

Water. Trees, shrubs, and perennials could use a good soak. The same is true of grass if watering it is now allowed in your community. Most plants survive winter better if they go into the season with well-watered roots. Water them again in October or November.

Empty your containers. Ceramic, terra cotta, concrete and clay containers can shatter if left outside during the winter. Clean them and stack them in the garage.

You'll give a sigh of relief in spring if you clean up your yard tools now. Wash dirt off the hoe, shovel, cultivator and the tiller blades. Put a film of oil on them to prevent rust.

Spread fertilizer on your grass in September or October.

Rake your lawn as needed. If you have a thin layer of leaves, simply chop them up with your lawn mower. But if you have lots of leaves, rake, bag and save the leaves to use as mulch once the soil freezes. If left on the grass, a thick layer of leaves can cause snow mold, which can damage grass. So keep up with your raking, say the experts.

Heavy backpacks weigh on health

Books, lunch, laptop, and more -- all go into a school backpack and before you know it, the backpack is heavy--often way too heavy.

Kids are getting back strains from toting their books and materials to school. According to the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA), a whopping 64 percent of American students ages 11 to 15 years reported back pain related to heavy backpacks. Twenty-one percent reported the pain lasting more than six months. Emergency rooms treat more than 2,000 injuries related to heavy backpacks every year.

It's not limited to young students, either. A Boston University study showed that 85 percent of university students report discomfort and pain associated with backpacks.

Consumer Reports found that in New York City schools, the average sixth grade student carried a backpack weighing from 18.4 pounds to 30 pounds; second and fourth grade students carried backpacks that weighed as much as five pounds.

Backpacks should weigh no more than 10 percent of a student's body weight, but more than half of students carry backpacks that are heavier, according to AOTA.

The way students use a backpack can be a problem. Slinging the pack over one shoulder may look cool, but it causes pain in the back and shoulders. Students should use a backpack with padded straps and wear both straps around the shoulders to distribute weight properly.

Parents can make sure the backpack is the right size. The pack should extend 2 inches below the shoulder blades to waist level or slightly above. It should not be wider or longer than a child's torso. Multiple compartments can also help distribute weight.

School is the doorway to your dreams.

Smartphones might end the checkout cha-cha

The checkout counter cha-cha: Swipe the card, step back, turn around, insert in chip reader, tap toe for 10 minutes while the card reader works.

Okay, it's not 10 minutes, but a chip reader takes double the time of a swipe -- about 13 seconds, according to Wall Street Journal tech writer Joanna Stern. Chip readers send an encrypted number to your bank, instead of data, so they are more secure.

Not all stores have chip card readers, possibly in response to wait times. According to Visa, only 28 percent of all merchants support chip readers.

All this may encourage the rise of the smartphone wallet.

Samsung Pay, available only on Android devices, lets users enter their credit card info into an app and then allows your phone to imitate a card swipe. Businesses do not have to have a special machine, so the service is accepted everywhere.

On iPhone 6 and later, ApplePay lets you pay with your phone wherever there is a wireless terminal. All you do is load your credit card information into your phone, or approve the credit card tied to your Apple account and you are ready. When you see a wireless terminal at checkout, pull out your iPhone instead of your wallet. No need to turn on the phone. As you move it within an inch of the terminal, the phone wakes up and opens wallet. Use touch ID to complete the transaction.

The future of luggage

Not since the invention of rolling luggage has the future of air travel looked so good.

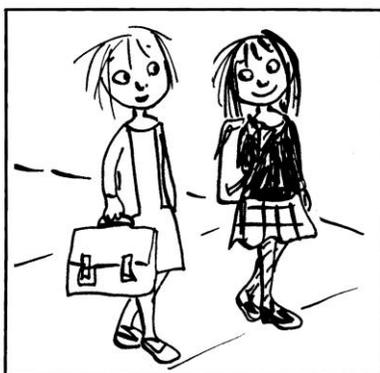

A brainy luggage whose time, if not the actual product, has come, is in development by Iran-based Ikap Robotics. The smart suitcase, Olive, not only knows its owner, it transports him.

Olive combines a Segway-type two-wheel transporter that is part of the suitcase. The suitcase itself builds a visual map of its surroundings and can follow its owner, distinguishing the owner from other people in a crowd.

Of course it has a built-in scale, GPS, WiFi and an alarmed lock system.

The idea took first place in the Service Robotics section of the 2016 Automatica Start-up World Competition in Munich.

It is not yet available, but versions of it will surely appear shortly.

Tamale Joe Casserole: Grandma's charm for modern tastes

This is the sort of dish you expect to find bubbling in grandma's oven. Tamale Joe Casserole combines the charm of a good tamale in a one-pot family dish that is quick and easy to make.

It's good for the church potluck, fantastic for Saturday afternoon with the grandkids, and like all good casseroles, you can change it to suit the tastes of the diners.

Tamales can be traced back as far as 5000 BC to ancient civilizations, like the Aztec, Maya, Olmeca and Tolteca. The ingredients are usually wrapped in a spongy masa harina dough and covered with a corn husk. The technique makes a typical tamale easy to take with you. Soldiers took tamales with them on marches. Families still use them to serve large gatherings.

Inside the dough, you can find anything from seafood to rice to beans and meat. When you think about it, the humble casserole dish is much the same; why shouldn't it be like a tamale?

This recipe can be altered to suit the audience. An adult crowd might like onion mixed in with the meat. Smoked paprika can take the place of chili powder if chili is too spicy. You can use pork, chicken or lamb to change up the taste in this dish, which is hard to ruin.

You will need:

- | | |
|-------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1/2 pound sliced link sausage | 1 8-ounce can of corn, drained |
| 1 1/2-pound ground beef | 16 ounces tomato sauce |
| 1 tablespoon chili powder | 1 cup milk |
| 2 teaspoon salt | 3/4 cup yellow corn meal |
| 1 cup pitted sliced olives | 3/4 teaspoon pepper |
| | 1 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese |

Before you start working, set your oven to 350 to let it preheat.

Cook the ground beef and sausage. Once the meat has fully cooked and has browned, drain off excess fat. Add all ingredients, except cheese and olives. Stir until well mixed. Spray a baking dish and pour ingredients in. Even the casserole out by running the back of a serving spoon over the top to create a flat top, then cover with grated cheese and add sliced olives. For a saltier dish, sprinkle coarse sea salt over the top before adding cheese and olives.

Bake in a 325-degree oven for 30 to 45 minutes, until cheese has melted.

The great ice cream cone controversy

While you're enjoying your favorite ice cream on National Ice Cream Cone Day, September 22, think about the container.

Is it waffle cone, sugar cone, or a cake cup?

All of these are relatively new ways to eat ancient confection and there is much disagreement as to who first came up with the edible cone.

In the 19th century, ice cream was served on biscuits and wafers, in cups and bowls, and in glass, metal, and paper cones. It was stuffed into cornets and cornucopias. About that time, street vendors appeared, selling ice cream in biscuit cups.

Some say the inventor of the edible dish was Italo Marchiony. In 1896, he had a chain of 45 ice cream pushcarts in New York City; he used edible biscuit cups and even got a patent in 1903 for a machine to make them.

But it wasn't a cone. It wasn't until the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair that the American cone was born, and the debate began.

One convincing story is that one of the 50 ice cream vendors at the fair, Arnold Fornachou, ran out of paper ice cream cups. Ernest Hamwi was selling waffles in the next cart and rolled up one for him to use. When Hamwi saw people liked the combination, he started making ice cream waffle cones for other vendors.

Soon most vendors copied the presentation. Many claimed to be the inventor of the cone; a few said they worked for Hamwi.

In the next 20 years, several patents were issued on cone-making machines, several cone companies produced enough ready-mades for fairs nationwide, and by 1924, production reached 245 million. Modern machines can produce 150,000 rolled cones every 14 hours. Joy Cone Company in Hermitage, PA, is the largest ice cream cone company in the world and produces more than 1.5 billion cones each year. It opened in 1918 and is still owned by the same family.

Saving challenges

Looking for a fun and relatively painless way to save money? Investment author Donna Freedman recommends savings challenges.

- The spare-change challenge. Put your change into a jar every night. In two months, wrap it and bank it.
- The dollar-bill challenge. Put all the Washingtons in a jar every night.
- Random number challenge. Pick a number, then bank bills whose serial numbers end in the digit you've chosen.
- Weekly challenge. Set aside $1 the first week of the month, $2 the second week and so on. Bank the resulting $10 to $15 per month.

House Cleaning Tip of the Month

The best way to clean the toilet bowl is to brush it frequently with a liquid all-purpose cleaner. In bowl toilet cleaners are for more serious stains. Scrubbing with an acidic powder or liquid is the one sure way to attack the mineral matter that causes most toilet bowl stains, particularly around the rim. Lastly, do not let any brand's claims to disinfect sway you. At best, a disinfecting cleaner can only temporarily cut the population of some germs.

Smart investing: Examine your basket

During your working life, you use the work of your hands to earn a paycheck -- and that is an important asset.

The work you do is just one part of your lifetime portfolio. The other part is what you do with your earnings and how you make your earnings grow. You wouldn't put all your money on lottery tickets, hoping for a big hit. Talk about putting all your eggs in one basket!

The same way, experts advise that you find many different baskets for your savings. This is called diversification, and it means everything to investing success.

One mistake is investing money in the company you work for. This overlaps the work of your hands with the work of your money. You are in one basket.

According to Intelligent Investor writer Jason Zweig, you don't want the work of your hands and the work of your dollars to be in the same place.

But many people do just that.

According to a recent study by the Social Science Research Network, 51 percent of people surveyed believed that a diversified bundle of 10 investments is riskier than investing in a single stock. Not true.

The study found that diversifying investments (putting money into different stocks or market sectors) reduces risk.

Zweig writes that people who don't diversify probably feel more comfortable investing in one company or stock they know, rather than ten other mysterious companies. But comfort is misleading.

One way to diversify investments is to invest in stock-market index funds. These funds put your money in hundreds of companies. Even if one-fifth lose money, you will still gain because the others have not lost money.
